United Way Launches Website

Suzanne Zutter, director of the United Way of Southwest Wyoming, announced Monday that the organization has launched a redesigned website, www.swunitedway.org. “We believe this website will be a valuable resource that provides our latest news and event information, as well as being a tool for our donors and volunteers,” said Zutter.

The website is now able to accept online donations and is populated with pages including Give, Advocate, Volunteer, About Us, Get Help, Events, Campaign Center, Focus Areas, Partners and News. Many pages have sub-pages with additional information or links to other sites. The site allows users to sign-up for the electronic United Way newsletter.

“As our community and organization grows, having a quality website is crucial in getting our message out and staying in touch with community members, also giving them a place to provide feedback. We will be adding additional pages as needed and growing the website over time,” said Kelly Frink, director of marketing and communications.

United Way of Southwest Wyoming supports health and human service organizations in Lincoln, Sublette, Sweetwater and Uinta counties. For more information on United Way and its community partners visit the website or contact Zutter at director@swunitedway.org.
